For example, the discovery of King Tutankhamun's golden mask, featuring inscriptions of spells and passages from the 'Book of the Dead'. reinforces just how significant this step was, in achieving the goal of making it to the afterlife.

Furthermore, the discovery of King Tutankhamun's tomb revealed a precious shrine, the Anubis Shrine. This figure was found guarding the entrance of the treasury in King Tutankhamun's tomb. The Anubis Shrine was used in the funerary procession of the Pharaoh. Anubis is the God of the dead. He was considered the inventor of embalming, the guardian of tombs, and a judge of the dead. Anubis is represented as a jackal-headed male figure. The Egyptians believed that at the judgement he weighed the heart of the dead against the feather of truth. "The upper decoration shows the so-called Djed pillar, a symbol of endurance which is closely linked with the God Osiris and the Tyet, which can stand for life, like the Ankh, and is a symbol of the goddess Isis" mentions Tutankhamun's world. Anubis was a paramount figure for people trying to reach the afterlife.

Additionally, another important artefact uncovered was the remarkable 'Heart Scarab', found on the heart of King Tutankhamun, secured underneath the wrappings of the mummy. The Heart Scarab was crucial, as it ensured that the heart, which the Ancient Egyptians regarded as the seed of emotion, memory, and intelligence, from giving evidence against the deceased owner in his judgement
